'Doctor' Herriot, clinic greeter

By Nancy O'Gorman

uck ran both ways the day a kitten named Herriot came to live at Sequim Animal Hospital.

She was rescued three years ago from a feral situation and needed a place to live around the same time Dr. Brian Marts' clinic cat, Tripod, died of kidney failure. Friendly little "Doctor" Herriot, as the kitten was named, fit right in with a place long known for its contribution to the health and well being of animals in Sequim and around the Olympic Peninsula.

Herriot greets patrons and pets alike who come through the door, entertaining them with her antics, while the staff takes care of business.

Both the cat and the staff, however, are known for going above and beyond the call of duty.

First, the humans: After 31 years of practicing veterinary medicine in Sequim, Herriot went from feral, homeless kitten to clinic mascot and greeter. She bids adieu to one retiring veterinarian but stays on to help his successor.

Dr. Marts is retiring at the end of April and will hand the baton to his successor and business partner, Dr. Heather Short.

Peninsula Friends of Animals has always been and continues to be an independent group that is not associated with any other group or shelter.

OUR MISSION

To prevent the birth of unwanted cats and dogs through progressive spay/neuter and educational programs; and to place as many homeless, neglected, and abused animals as possible into good, safe, permanent homes.

From the Editor's Desk

This is a reprint from our Winter 2003 issue of Pet Tidings by Gary Del Mastro, shelter manager of Safe Haven at the time. We felt it was well written and worth repeating. With Gary's permission, we present it here, six years later but ever so timely.

We're an almost unbelievably diverse group of people: married, widowed and never married; city born and raised to country bumpkin; socially active and loners; Democrats, Republicans and none of the above; smokers and drinkers to non-smokers and teetotalers; employed, unemployed and retired; financially well off to poverty stricken; drivers and non-drivers; dog-oriented to catfriendly; pro-life to pro-choice; born before World War I, born after the war in Vietnam.

Nothing in the world could have brought some of us together except for our common love of companion animals. Absolutely nothing.

Friendships have blossomed between rich and poor, old and young, ultra conservative and wild-eyed liberal, and staunchly religious to nearly atheistic individuals. Bonds have been created that will last a lifetime, all for the passion and cause we refer to as animal welfare.

If you're not already involved, there is no time like the present to step forward. Local animals and your community need your time, energy and financial donations to help put an end to the suffering. Individuals are needed to create and post adoption flyers, speakers and information table staffers are needed to educate the public, and foster homes are required to temporarily house animals for whom there is no room in shelters.

Sponsors are needed for unadoptable animals in PFOA's care. People willing to do humane trapping of feral cats and to provide transportation for other animals are necessary parts of any no-kill organization.

Office help is desperately needed, both from computer skilled and computer illiterate individuals. There is a continuing need for aggressive spaying and neutering, and PFOA is often asked by low-income families for financial help with other veterinary care. And there is always a need for volunteer manual labor around Safe Haven's building and grounds.

There are countless ways to aid the animals in our midst. Nearly all of them result in connections with vibrant, interesting, diverse local people who share a common passion for helping otherwise helpless creatures.

It is truly amazing that a single issue is capable of bringing out such similar energy in people who otherwise seem to be so essentially different. Nothing but an intense love and appreciation for animals could have brought us together in this way.

Gary Del Mastro

People stocking the pet food pantry

In our last issue of Pet Tidings on Page 2, we published a note about 12year-old Annika Pederson asking her friends to bring pet food instead of birthday gifts to her party. She then donated the food to PFOA.

We have been reminded of others who have made similar efforts to help. Julia Murphy asked for pet food for her 80th birthday celebration and sent nearly 150 lbs. of food to Safe Haven. Marci Mathieu held a 16th birthday party for her dog Shelby and provided a jar for donations to be made to PFOA in Shelby's name. PFOA member Sharon Palmer asked her friends to send money to the PFOA pet food bank instead of Christmas gifts. And instead of exchanging Christmas presents, Jay and Pam Thornall purchased pet food, which they brought to Safe Haven, as did David and Melody Todnem.

We are grateful for the thoughtfulness of all who think of ways to help the companion animals in our communities. PFOA provides food for the pets in our care but makes the donated bags and cans available to pets of low-income families. Call PFOA at 360-452-0414 if you would like to donate food for the pets of these families, too!

Frosty and the Snowman

By Susan Skaggs

wo white puppies were dropped off at the Clallam County Humane Society on a cold and blustery Friday night in December. Not an unusual happening, except that these two puppies were apparently both blind and deaf.

PFOA's Canine Adoption Counselor, Nancy Campbell, had been in contact with the owner and had been attempting to arrange foster care when the dogs were relinquished to the humane society. They were the last of a litter of five, the other three healthy puppies having been sold to families in the area.

So the next morning, a PFOA volunteer went to the Humane Society and picked up the puppies. They were taken to Dr. Joyce Murphy of the Olympic Animal Eye Clinic in Port Hadlock.

Dr. Murphy diagnosed the puppies with "merle locus," (a pigment gene that causes them to be albino in color), and as also having "a tendency for the Waardenburg Syndrome."

Among other symptoms, this syndrome can produce small eyeballs, thin retinas, cataracts and hearing loss. Indeed, both male puppies, now named Frosty and the Snowman, had vision deficit and at least partial hearing loss.

"Most of these puppies (with this syndrome) can improve with treatment and age," Dr. Murphy says.

"Most of these dogs can do very well in a home environment and live a nice, happy life. I believe both of these dogs can do that."

Sue Miles, their temporary foster mom, agrees.

"Frosty and the Snowman are in the prime of puppyhood and having a blast," she says. "Their days are full of endless playing, wrestling, chewing and snoozing. They're just like every other puppy except for one thing they are both blind and the Snowman is deaf to boot."

Frosty and the Snowman were born around Nov. 9, 2008, to a Shih-Tzu mom and a Lhasa Apso dad. Frosty is white with a few tan spots while Snowman is pure white. Their disabilities don't seem to bother these happy little guys, but will present some challenges for a new family. The pups' safety will always be an issue. They can't see where they're going, and the Snowman can't hear any verbal cues to help him get around. In addition to the usual puppy proofing, special awareness will have to be given to stairwells, doors leading outside, security in outside, security in the yard, plants, and pointy objects.

Another pet in the home would be wonderful, but only if he/she doesn't mind being bumped into during a nap, while eating, etc. A nurturing, easygoing dog in the family would be a terrific help to these pups.

Frosty and the Snowman also need the basic training any pup requires. They know the command "sit," which is verbal for Frosty, and two taps on the back for the Snowman. Frosty comes when you call him, but this doesn't work for a puppy who can't hear, like the Snowman. While the pups are currently being litter box trained, they will also need to be taught how to take care of potty issues outside.

They need to be handled a lot, brushed daily, taken to the groomer regularly and socialized with other animals and children.

These little guys love to be around people and are incredibly sweet and affectionate, probably even more than "normal" puppies. They enjoy being held and are terrific little lap warmers. They shouldn't be left alone for long periods and need a home where someone is willing to spend a lot of time with them. There shouldn't be small children around them except when supervised by an adult.

Frosty and the Snowman have been dealt a challenging hand in life, but, with a patient and caring family, they will supply some lucky person(s) with many years of love and joy.

Mews from the board

Farming at Safe Haven

The Board, supporters, and members of PFOA are always looking for ways to raise money for our programs, especially in these difficult economic times.

Last fall, Angus Trent, our volunteer property manager, took a look at our 35 aces, much of it unused, and saw a way to create income. He spoke with several farmers and invited Kurt Burres from the University of Washington Extension Service to come over to Safe Haven and evaluate our soil. It was determined that we have about 30 acres that can be used to grow hay and/or provide grazing.

There is preparation necessary to ready the ground that lay fallow and became full of brambles and bushes over the years. Before the winter, Angus saw to it that it was mowed, low spots filled in, and a great deal of debris cleared away.

The idea is to arrange for a farmer to share-crop the land, prepare it for growing hay and grazing sheep. This would benefit the land, the farmer, and PFOA.

It would also eliminate the fire hazard that the long, dry grass presents in the summer.

Sponsorship: Support for adoption-challenged cats

Are you a pet lover who can't have a pet right now for one of any number of reasons? If so, there is a wonderful way you can still connect with a cat who would love to be "your" pet.

PFOA has, as all no-kill shelters do, several longtime residents who have not, and perhaps never will be, chosen by someone to share their home and life. These cats will be cared for and loved here at Safe Haven until someone who sees their true worth comes along, or until the natural end of their lives.

For a very modest monthly donation, you can become a foster parent to one of these sweet, hard-toplace pets at Safe Haven or in one of our devoted foster homes. You'll join a large group of caring souls who love and help these kitties, adding mightily to the happiness in the world.

Won't you sign up today and become a sponsor, a foster "mom" or "dad," to a cat or kitten who needs you?

Monthly sponsorship is just $10 per pet. A pet may also be sponsored for an entire year for $120 or for a pet's lifetime for $500. Just use the envelope enclosed with this newsletter and send it back with your sponsorship payment. We will send you pictures of your sponsored cat along with a story about the pet's history and how he or she came to be with PFOA. (Or call 360-452-0414 for more information).

Cat 'helps' around clinic, vets devoted to spay/neuter

At 65, Marts is ready to enjoy the good life, which may very well include sailing around the world. And he can look back on more than three decades of service to the people and animals that needed him. In addition to countless cats and dogs that come to the clinic, he has tended to livestock, Olympic Game Farm critters, even bear, elk and otter from Olympic National Park.

But what Dr. Marts has done for Peninsula Friends of Animals, as well as other rescue groups, can only be described as priceless - helping PFOA spay and neuter, at a reduced rate, a few hundred pets each year through a special monthly spay/neuter clinic, not to mention being available for emergency medical care. Add to that his annual participation in the Clallam County Fair "Kiss a Pig" contest (he won last year with proceeds going to the local 4-H Club), and allowing school children to "job-shadow" at his clinic and you've got a veterinarian who will be keenly missed.

The spaying and neutering of cats and dogs is important to Marts, which is why he's been willing to help PFOA reach its program goals every year.

"There are just too many animals," he said. "Unless you're a breeder, pets should be spayed. I feel a responsibility to help make life better for the community and for the animals."

Most veterinarians do "giveaways," he said, because they feel responsible, they have the knowledge and ability to do so, and they can still make a good living running a business.

Participating in school programs and teaching children responsibility for their pets are all part of the job, he said. And he's confident the clinic will be in good hands when Dr. Short takes over in May. She will be the fourth owner of Sequim Animal Hospital since Dr. John Stevens opened for business in 1930. Stevens sold it to Dr. George Bell, who in turn sold it to Marts in 1978. Marts had the current red-roofed clinic built at 202 N. Seventh Ave. in 1992.

Dr. Short has been working at Sequim Animal Hospital since 2006, after graduating from Auburn University College of Veterinary Medicine in Auburn, Alabama. She spent the last few months of her schooling as an intern at the clinic. By the end of the internship, she and Marts realized that Sequim Animal Hospital was the perfect place for her career.

Like Marts, Short believes in the value of educating her clients and reaching out to the community with spay/neuter programs, too.

"When you teach people how to care for their pets, they're more likely to learn that vaccinations and preventive care are much cheaper than treating a sick animal," she said.

Originally from Grand Rapids, Michigan, the 31-year-old Short has family in Seattle where she and her husband, Dean, had spent some time in the past. After visiting the Olympic Peninsula many times, they decided it would be a good place to call home and raise a family. The couple has a yearold daughter, Ainsley, three dogs and two cats.

Dr. Short is in the process of looking for a new veterinarian partner to share duties at Sequim Animal Hospital after Dr. Marts's retirement — which brings us back to "Doctor" Herriot, the clinic cat.

Oh, sure, Herriot lives the good life as an official clinic cat. Her main job is to look cute and fluffy, let children pet her, and take the dogs' minds off the reasons they're there. She is doted on, has toys and the best of care — even her framed photo adorns the office wall like a corporate CEO. And just like the entire staff at Sequim Animal Hospital, even Herriot goes above and beyond the call of duty.

Dr. Marts remembered a day when a woman's beloved pet had just died and she was sitting in the waiting room, grieving openly for her painful loss. Herriot jumped up, sat down next to her and, ever so gently, touched a paw to the woman's arm.

After all, even Herriot has important work at the clinic.

Chacha

Hokus

Chacha and Hokus are 4- to 5-month-old sister and brother. Chacha, the little girl, is a tuxedo kitty while Hokus is all shiny black. These little darlings love to play together and are as sweet and cute as can be.

Disco

Limbo

Disco and Limbo are another sister/brother pair of kittens. These two were bottle-fed as babies since their mother died early in their infancy. They are inquisitive and extremely friendly with Safe Haven volunteers. Limbo, the boy, is all black. Disco has an unusual look, with random silver tips on some of her black fur. Together they're a purr-fectly wonderful pair!

Fagin

Thistle

Fagin and Thistle are related, and have bonded at the shelter, so they should be adopted together. They both are quiet, large, black neutered males about 5 years old now. Fagin came to enjoy his food bowl more than Thistle did, hence he is on a diet and is working on losing excess weight. They will add elegance and affection to their new home.

Please call PFOA's message line at 360-452-0414 to talk about any of these featured pets; a volunteer will return your call. Or go online to see many others at www.safehavenPFOA.org

"Dear Peninsula Friends of Animals . . .

Dear Peninsula Friends of Animals,

We adopted Rody in October. We have renamed him Charlie and are happy to report he is doing exceptionally well in our home. He made a seamless transition, quickly reaching a point where we can't imagine our home without him.

Our last cat lived with us for 20 years and we look forward to the years ahead with Charlie — hopefully at least 20!

Our daughter, Emily, is particularly fond of Charlie, and he of her. She shares her news with you and has decided to donate a portion of her savings to PFOA. Though the donation is not large, it represents a sizeable amount of her saved funds and, more importantly, represents her heartfelt thanks to PFOA for being there for our beloved Charlie and other cats in need.

Charlie is doing well and has found a good home (with us). And we have found a wonderful cat. Thank you! Sincerely, Kristin Glenn

Dear PFOA, I really enjoyed the winter Pet Tidings. Only wish I could do more. Adrienne Monro

Dear PFOA,

Now that Goldie and Lucky have finally achieved the recognition they justly deserve (see "Handy Paw Warmer" on page 4 of the Winter 2009 issue of Pet Tidings) — Goldie has decided to branch out into painting, as seen here in "our" studio in Diamond Point.

We all loved the article. Clyde, Patty, Goldie, and Lucky Mowrey

Dear Friends of the Animals,

This is to let you know about our wonderful "Cuddles" whom we adopted in January. She is the most loving, beautiful cat we have ever owned!

She comes to our lap to be loved and petted—always purring, never a threat of biting or clawing. Oh, we love her so much!

Many thanks to PFOA and also to her first owner who loved her and helped her to grow into this precious kitty!

To my Friends at the Safe Haven shelter,

I thought I should let you know all about my adventures in my new home. It was pretty traumatic to be put in that cat carrier and then bounced around in a car. When they let me out in the house I shot under the bed in their guest room. I stayed there until 10 that night. I crept out and had a look around.

Boy, what a fun place to snoop. I jumped on the guest room bed and found that very comfortable. Then my new Mom and Dad went to bed. They shut their bedroom door and let me have the run of the house. I could smell that rat that they had been trying to catch. That was interesting for a while but then I got lonesome.

I sat outside their bedroom door and cried until 2 a.m. I heard my Dad say, "What have we gotten ourselves into!" I didn't know what that meant, but he chased me back into the guest room for the night. In the morning they sure looked tired, but I was happy to greet them.

Everything looked brighter as I toured the house and picked out my favorite chairs. My Mom made me two big soft cushions. One is on a chest where I can stretch out and look out the window. I found out that they have nice laps to jump into, too.

Now I patrol the house all night and greet them at their bedroom door when they FINALLY get up. We visit for a while and then I just have to have a long nap under the bed after my exhausting night. I spend the afternoon making the rounds of laps and chairs. I get all rested up for evening. You can see that I have a hard life here.

On the eighth day, I caught the dirty rat. Dad and I had a disagreement about who it belonged to, but I finally gave in to him. I am a BIG HERO now. This really is Cat Heaven.

I miss you all but I think I'll stay. Thanks for all your love and care! Your friend, Max (they call me Maxwell)

Ask PFOA: How do I introduce a new cat?

By Ann Gilson

First of all, it is extremely important not to bring any pet into your home until it has been to your veterinarian. It should be thoroughly examined, treated for any external or internal parasites it may harbor, be tested for FeLV/FIV and shown to be negative, be given all appropriate vaccinations, and have an Avid chip implanted. It may or may not require bathing or grooming.

Some cats have had some or most of this done prior to coming to you. But if you do not have written proof of this, have it done yourself. I cannot stress this too much! However, if your pet needs several different shots, it may be best to have one or two of them done a couple of weeks later, so as not to overwhelm the cat's system. Talk to your veterinarian about it.

Now you are ready to introduce the new cat (or sometimes a pair of cats or kittens) to your house. The way the introduction is done often makes the difference between a successful integration and a disastrous one leading to constant upset, and in some cases to a failed adoption.

If there is no resident pet of any kind the job is much simpler, but still very important. Common sense and patience are the key.

It is very important that the new companion animal be put in a reasonably confined area — a laundry room, spare bedroom, or even a large bathroom is ideal — to begin with. There should be water, dry food (if appropriate) and a large cat box (for an adult) or medium one (for a kitten). If possible, the food and the litter should be the kind the cat is accustomed to. A soft bed or basket on the floor should be provided. Be sure the area is safe — no accessible medicines, cleaning supplies, sharp items, things to tip over or pull down, no rubber bands, string, etc. (think "childproof").

Give your pet several hours to several days in this area to get used to the smells and sounds of your home, to the space and to you. Do not allow small children, or even older ones, to frighten or tire the new resident. The kitty may hide or run from you at first — or he may decide you're his best buddy and snuggle from the beginning. Let the cat set his own pace.

Once your new cat is comfortable with you and his new quarters, leave the door open and give him a chance to explore, under supervision. Unless you have a very small house, don't open the door and go off for the day, as he may find a hiding place that you can't find, and scare you to death until he decides to come out.

You should be all set now, and if you keep your cat indoors at all times, or in a secure outdoor enclosure on nice days, chances are that you have years of loving companionship ahead.

Now, if you already have one or more feline companions, introductions are more complicated. And if there are canines in your home, they may be even more so.

The process is basically the same as introducing a pet into a petless home, only it takes longer and requires a > lot more supervision — and luck. If you have a resident dog who hates cats, or has a history of harming them, do not attempt to introduce a cat into your home. Not even if it is an outdoors dog and the cat will be indoors only. If your dog is a mellow guy who loves everybody, you can consider him a cat for purposes of introduction.

If you have a cat who is extremely territorial and possessive and who is boss of her world, or one who is very shy and dependant on you, it would be best to proceed very, very carefully if you need to take in another cat. If you have a choice, don't. Not if they have to share any space.

On the other hand: if your cat or cats are the friendly, laid back sort, adding a new cat (especially a stray who needs a home, or a shelter cat) can be a wonderful thing for everyone.

The main difference in the introduction process is to take plenty of time, to introduce the new cat very briefly and only when you can be physically present and paying close attention. The new cat should be ready to come out of its room on its own, and exposure be limited to only 15 minutes or less to begin with, unless it is obvious that both animals are relaxed and at ease. Take several weeks of such successful encounters before leaving them alone together. Sometimes catnip, Feliway (a calming, pheromone substance) or even the drug acepromazine can be used to calm the cats before or during their first encounters. Ask your vet for help if there seems to be any fear or animosity operating.

All this sounds like a lot of trouble, and it is not always necessary. But many an adoption has failed, cats have been emotionally or physically traumatized, and family members upset and disappointed, because proper care was not taken. Look at it from the new cat's point of view and that will help guide you. Oh yes, and be sure to add another cat box for each new cat, in an easily accessible place away from the existing one(s).

"We who choose to surround ourselves with lives even more temporary than our own live within a fragile circle, easily and often breached. Unable to accept its awful gaps, we still would live no other way. We cherish memory as the only certain immortality, never fully understanding the necessary plan."

A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the community room and be followed by the meeting beginning at 6:30 p.m. It will be brief but important. Join us for fellowship and good food and drink!

Painting party time!

On two beautiful days in early October, volunteers washed and painted the front and side of the exterior of Safe Haven. Parts of the garage had never been painted and the eaves were in need of scraping. A sign was put up at Safe Haven asking folks to donate $20 for a gallon of paint — we needed about 13 gallons for this part of the project — and enough money was donated to purchase rolls and brushes and enough paint to complete the remainder of the painting in the Spring.

Angus Trent — our volunteer property manager organized the event, purchased the materials, supervised the work and provided much of the labor. Mike and Carol Howard also donated their labor and washed the entire building while Diane Lopez knocked down years worth of cobwebs and Angus did the taping. The next day, Angus, Diane, Sherry Creech and Susan Kremlin painted away!

Thanks to all who supported and participated in this effort. Let us know if you would be available for this type of volunteer work. There is always maintenance needed to keep Safe Haven up to par. And you'd be surprised at how much fun can be had in the process!

NOTICE

PFOA will not be having a giant garage sale this year. If you have helped in the past and are planning to have a sale of your own, please consider giving a portion of your sales and/or having a donation container to help the animals. It would be most appreciated.

■ PFOA WISH LIST: Wet and dry dog and cat food, any brands (for pets of low-income community residents), Fancy Feast canned cat food, clumping clay cat litter, bleach, vinegar, paper towels, laundry detergent, dish detergent, new brooms and mops, postage stamps, decorative bark for front flower beds, new hooded cat beds.

DARE TO DREAM:

Farm tractor: Are you planning to upgrade your farm tractor? If you would consider donating the old one to PFOA, please call us at 360-452-0414 and leave a message for Angus.

WANTED ~ VOLUNTEERS:

■ WRITERS — to write very short pieces for Pet Tidings, published four times per year. Also needed are more typists to simply put text into a Word document and e-mail it to the editors. Can work from home. E-mail at pettidings@olypen.com.

■ THREAD AND FABRICS— Regular sewing thread such as Coats & Clark Dual Duty, any color, any size spool, even partially used. 100% cotton fabric in dog and cat patterns only. Contact below.

■ SEWERS — the famous "potholder ladies" are looking for another "potholder lady" who would be interested in doing "production" — someone willing to make potholders on their own in between monthly Sewfests. They would not have to commit to it on a permanent basis. If interested, call for more details: 360-461-0348 or 360-457-1605 between 7-9 p.m.
